ABOUT YOUR HOME

Color is one of the most important considerations in decorating a child's room. Bright, clear colors are preferred. It seems children are not so inhibited about color as adults.

Parents have made pink and blue popular for babies. However, if a baby is given a choice between pink or red he will choose red every time. It has long been known that primary colors appeal to youngsters.

The 7 and 8 year olds will have very definite ideas concerning color. It is wise for parents to encourage these ideas. It is only natural that as they grow older, approaching high school and college, they will begin to like more sophisticated color combinations. These colors usually have a much grayer tone than their former choices.

When choosing furniture for the children's room try to find a versatile type that will be interchangeable and not limited to any one room. It should be able to continue its usefulness as the family grows. Beds that can later double as sofas are good.

Be as practical as possible in the hoice of rugs and fabrics. The doit-yourself ideas are perfect for a child's room. Pictures he can paint or a piece of furniture he can help build will encourage a child's individuality.

Frame some of the child's original paintings for the walls if the idea pleases him. Encourage him to take an interest in decorating his room and it will follow that his pride in the room will cause him to take care of the furnishings.

Says Red Cross Fund Sufficient

H. E. Kerr, Charman of the Appomattox County Chapter American Red Cross, today announced receipt of the following telegram advising that sufficient funds had been contributed for Flood Relief in the Northeast. The telegram, from the national Red Cross president, read:

"Wish to advise you that through generosity of the American people our chapters have, today, Saturday, reported in contributions and pledged gifts to the Red Cross Flood Disaster Fund more than $10,000,000. This assures us of sufficient funds to meet adequately Red Cross requirements in Eastern states flood relief operation. You are therefore authorized to inform the people within your chapter jurisdiction in whatever way seems proper to you that with funds available, contributed and pledged no further contributions are necessary.
